Please note that the content of this book primarily consists of articles available from Wikipedia or other free sources online. The Vancouver Dart (Agrotis vancouverensis) is a moth of the Noctuidae family. It is found in the Pacific Northwest of North America and is common west of the Cascade Mountains. The length of the forewings is about 33 mm. Adults are on wing in late spring and early summer. There is one generation per year. The larvae feed on various herbs. A moth is an insect closely related to the butterfly, both being of the order Lepidoptera. Moths form the majority of this order; there are thought to be 150,000 to 250,000 different species of moth (about ten times the number of species of butterfly), with thousands of species yet to be described.
