C., January 18th, 1891* It was no wonder that good men hesitated to set their slaves free when such was the outlook. It need not puzzle us when we find that the slaves themselves were so apathetic. Freedom, as they saw it, had few attractions. They preferred to bear those ills they had than see to others that they knew not of. It was this state of affairs which made the Colonization Society a blessing to the country. It provided an asylum for the freed man, and it encouraged the doubtful to take the heroic plunge of freeing their slaves. When true freedom came there was no apathy. When the blacks understood that life was before them to make or mar, exactly as it had been for their masters when the roving instinct of the savage, so long repressed by the patrol, was given scope, they rose as gladly as any people and rejoiced in the treasure they had found. It must have seemed to many of its friends then as if the work of the Colonization Society had been accomplished and that it might adjourn sine die, with the consciousness that it had acted the part of the Good Samaritan to the man lying by the wayside, beaten and robbed. But through all the years which have elapsed since the war, - so many that when we speak of it our children ask if we mean the Revolutionary War - through all these years there has been something to be done, a sort of paying the charges at the Inn,...
