PEN AND SWORD, UK, 2006. Hardback. Condition: NEW. Dust Jacket Condition: Very GOOD. 2006. HARDBACK.NEW BOOK A IN DUST JACKET WITH MINOR RUBBING TO FRONT CORNER EDGE OF JACKET. POSTED FROM THE UK IN 1-2 WORKING DAYS IN A PROTECTIVE CARD WRAP. During the Second World War Stockwell's drive and qualities of personal leadership saw him rise from major to major-general, and in due course he commanded no fewer than four different divisions before taking on his most famous command. As a major-general himself, Jonathon Riley understands the qualities necessary to succeed as a professional soldier, and as a fellow Royal Welch Fusilier he understands Stockwell's passion for his regiment. After distinguished service with the commandos in Norway in 1940, Stockwell led 2nd Royal Welch Fusiliers in the invasion of Madagascar in 1942, followed by 29th Independent Infantry Brigade, and 82nd (West African) Division in Burma in 1944-5. Having served with the Royal West African Frontier Force pre-war, Stockwell understood the qualities of his men, and General Riley takes the opportunity to redress a serious historical injustice regarding the 82nd who served with dedication and skill, but never received the recognition they deserved. Following the war Stockwell served on operational tours in Palestine and Malaya where helicopters made their first effective operational appearance, and between times as Commandant of Sandhurst, playfully giving a lift to two cadets on his arrival without revealing his identity. Stockwell lived in what the Chinese might call 'interesting times', and Jonathon Riley's biography gives an excellent picture of one man's part in shaping them. Size: 319 PAGES.
